During this time the Earth's crust cooled and rocks and continental plates began to form. million years-in the Earth's magnetic field was established, protecting the early planet from intense solar winds capable of stripping away any atmosphere which existed. Deep time is the concept of geologic time. The modern philosophical concept was developed in the 18th century by Scottish geologist James Hutton (). [1] [2] The age of the Earth has been determined to be, after a long and complex history .

DEMONSTRATION 4 - To really put the impact of humans into the deep time perspective, an effective basis for an analogy is a football field (actually a soccer field is better because it has metric dimensions and so the math is easier).

"Deep time" refers to the time scale of geologic events, which is vastly, almost unimaginably greater than the time scale of human lives and human plans. It is one of geology's great gifts to the world's set of important ideas. The concept of deep time was first described in by the Scottish geologist James Hutton, although only coined as a term years later, by the American author John McPhee.
