As a result, in central fields of Catholic theology today very different forms of thinking co-exist: e.g. transcendental theology and salvation historical theology, analytic theology, renewed scholastic and metaphysical theology, political and liberation theology.

Chapter - 2 Issues in Contextual Theology Because contextualization is a new way of doing theology, at least on the conscious, reflexive level, the contextual theologians faces a number of issues and questions that were seldom dealt with in classical theology.

The focus of reconstruction theology is in the advocacy of human rights 1, the peoples full participation in law-making and in community-building in Africa south of the Sahara. This Christian reconstruction theology seeks to contribute to the promotion and preservation of justice, peace and reconciliation.
